2025 Thrive Educational Series for Professionals

Healthy Communication for Families

Date/Time: Thursday, March 20, 2025, at 4 pm ET

Communication is a fundamental and crucial part of everyday life. Whether you communicate with others in person, on the phone, through email or text messaging, or on social media platforms, you share and give information with and to others, and they share and give information with and to you. This presentation is for professionals who work with parents and caregiving adults and families, and it focuses on how professionals can help parents engage in healthy communication with their child and family.

Presented by the Clearinghouse for Military Family Readiness at Penn State

The Clearinghouse for Military Family Readiness at Penn State (Clearinghouse) is an applied research center committed to advancing Service members' and their families' health and well-being. The Clearinghouse takes a solution-oriented approach that includes conducting applied research studies, building workforce expertise through training and resource provision, implementing and evaluating evidence-informed programs and practices, and delivering objective data and policy-relevant findings, so decisions can be made based on the best science and evidence available. The Clearinghouse is located within Penn State's Social Science Research Institute. The Thrive Initiative is a collaboration between the Clearinghouse and the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense's Military Community and Family Policy.
